OCULA

By Ocula – 14 July 2025, Global

As the northern hemisphere continues on its way through a record-breaking summer, this month brings us an intriguing cast of exhibitions across the continents: reinterpretations of a classic work by Hieronymus Bosch, creative explorations of blindness, first-time shows, and career surveys. Here are 11 of the must-sees among Ocula's member galleries, as picked out by our team.

11. Aubrey Levinthal, Mirror Matter (28 June–13 September 2025) at Ingleby, Edinburgh

Up in Edinburgh, Scottish gallery Ingleby brings the works of American painter Aubrey Levinthal across the pond for their very first exhibition in the United Kingdom.

You've got until mid-September to stop by the gallery to see a wide range of work by the Philadelphia-based painter, who uses oils to render uncanny visions of her city and everyday life that play with the human form in surprising and arresting ways. —[O]

Main image: Noor Mahnun (Anum), Baju Kurung (2025) (detail). Oil on linen. 120 x 150 cm (unframed); 123 x 153 cm (framed). Courtesy the artist and Yeo Workshop, Singapore. Photo: Puah Chin Kok.

Exhibition view: Aubrey Levinthal, Mirror Matter, Ingleby, Edinburgh (28 June–13 September 2025). Courtesy the artist and Ingleby.