

DAVID AUSTEN

David Austen works as a painter, sculptor, printmaker and filmmaker. Whatever the medium, the elements of his work come together as if part of a strange but wonderful story which reveal a dark, yet endearing vision of the world. His paintings on flax canvas, delicate watercolour and gouache works on paper, suspended objects and staged scenarios borrow from film noir and 19th Century literature creating a bittersweet, psycho-sexual world inhabited by strange and lovelorn characters.

In recent years, Austen has made two large groups of etchings which seem like strange storyboards for these fractured tales, and which in turn have led to the making of works in film. His first, Smoking Moon (shown at both Camden Arts Centre and the British Film Institute) was followed by Crackers, commissioned for his most comprehensive solo exhibition to date at Milton Keynes Gallery (2007). In 2009, Austen was the Stanley Picker Fellow at Kingston University where he wrote and directed his first feature length film End of Love. Austen's films have been exhibited widely at locations including the Locarno Film Festival, Switzerland; the Institute of Contemporary Arts, London; the Edinburgh International Film Festival and the curated film programme at Art Basel Miami Beach. For the 2016 edition of Art Basel Miami Beach Ingleby Gallery presented a dedicated exhibition of work by David Austen including significant new bodies of work including Silence Beach; The light that fell upon us burned, night flowers and *Naked*s. A major solo exhibition will be presented by Dundee Contemporary Arts in 2019.
