

CHARLES AVERY

In 2004, Charles Avery embarked on what will be a lifelong project titled The Islanders: a painstakingly detailed description of a fictional world that functions in parallel to our own universe, realised in drawing, painting, sculpture and text. These large-scale, narrative drawings and sculptural installations question our ideas about the nature of time, place and being. Elements of the project have been exhibited at the Parasol Unit, London, and the Museum Boijmans Van Beuningen, Rotterdam. In 2007, Avery represented Scotland at the 52nd Venice Biennale, and in 2014 Avery was exhibited in the National Gallery of Modern Art as a part of the GENERATION project, which celebrated 25 years of contemporary art in Scotland.

A major exhibition, The People and Things of Onomatopoeia, was presented at the Ingleby Gallery in the summer of 2015 accompanied by Tree No. 5: a public commission located in Waverley Station for the Edinburgh Art Festival. Tree No.5 was subsequently exhibited at Parasolstice- Winter Light projects at the Parasol Unit, London. One of the latest installments of The Islanders projects was presented as part of the Kochi-Muziris Biennale in Kerala December 2016 - March 2017. Ingleby will present a solo exhibition at our new Edinburgh gallery premises in spring 2019.
